ed for it by Louis Brault, a leader of the Massachusetts American Legions.

The award honored a legion who had contributed to their community

"The event was done from the heart to help the children of the community," Gariepy said.

Gariepy was proud the auxiliary had received this award after the work they have put in to help the Holyoke community and to keep the Holyoke American Legion open.

"So many legions are falling to the wayside because the members are getting older," Gariepy said. "That's where the auxiliary comes in, we take over and we help fill in the gaps."

The auxiliary helps to plan all of the community and fundraising events for the American Legion.

The goal of these events is to help continue to connect the legion to the community and keep the legion itself open.

"We have a lot of people who are widowed or widowers and they have nowhere else to go, so they come here to socialize," Gariepy explained. "Without the legion, we would lose that."

Therefore, this award meant all the more to Gariepy. It showed that her efforts, and the efforts of the other auxiliary members, are seen and make an impact on people around them.

She hopes that it will help to fuel more and more events for the community to come.

The legion has many more events planned in the future. Gariepy looks forward to their upcoming breakfast with Santa event.

The event will cost $10 for adults and $5 for children and includes breakfast and visits from beloved holiday characters.

"We give out gifts to the children that come and there's a lovely breakfast," Gariepy said.

Garipey shared that her favorite part of the event every year is watching the kids' faces when Santa, Mrs. Claus and the Grinch enter the party.

"The kids light up, it's wonderful," Gariepy said. "Even for the Grinch, who you would think would be a scary figure to them, they gravitate right towards him."

On top of this event, the legion also has some ongoing drives. They have a consistent food drive that goes on throughout the year. All the food donated goes to Kate's Kitchen.

Additionally, the legion has a gift drive and a winter clothes drive ongoing right now to help families in need throughout the winter.

Garipey encourages people to come by the legion when they want, whether it be to give or take part in the events.

"Everyone is welcome," she said. "I don't care if you are a veteran or not, you are welcome."
