FILM REVIEW

'Downton Abbey: A New Era' an enjoyable experience

By Bob Garver

It might not be the epitome of blockbuster entertainment, but I do understand the appeal of "Downton Abbey."

The British television series, which ran 2010-2015, is recognized as the most acclaimed "international" series in Emmy history. And of course, it developed a fandom based on its impeccable 1920s costumes and sets, as well as its intricate storylines and snappy dialogue. A post-series movie came out in 2019, and made just short of $100 million at the domestic box office. That performance warranted a sequel with "A New Era."

I don't think the new film will find the same success as its predecessor, as it's opening in a "New Era" of its own, one where theater attendance is way down. But I would love to be proven wrong, as this is a very enjoyable movie.

Everyone from the aristocrats to the servants has a story at Downton Abbey, with over 20 billed characters interacting. The movie does the abundant cast better justice than I can in my story summation. Dowager Countess Violet Crawley (Maggie Smith) inherits a villa in the south of France from an acquaintance she hasn't seen in decades. Her son Robert (Hugh Bonneville) brings his wife Cora (Elizabeth McGovern) and a host of family members and servants to the villa to meet the benefactor's son (Jonathan Zaccai) and hopefully uncover the nature of their parents' relationship (Robert fears the worst).

Meanwhile, Downton Abbey itself plays host to a film crew using the mansion for a location shoot, much to the chagrin of older family and staff who consider movies vulgar. Robert's daughter and estate manager Mary Talbot (Michelle Dockery) oversees the chaos, including the film being changed from a silent to a talkie midway through. Lady Mary is quick to volunteer her services, which impresses director Jack Barber (Hugh Dancy). Diva actress Myrna Dalgleish (Laura Haddock) is rude to everybody, but changes her tune in humility when the changes don't play to her strengths.

Dashing leading man Guy Dexter (Dominic West) takes up a relationship with head butler Barrow (Robert-James Collier). Former footman Molesley (Kevin Doyle) discovers he has a gift for writing screenplays. And much, much more!

So much of this movie is just so pleasant. Problems like the production shutting down or a character's health scare never seem to last more than a single-digit number of minutes (raising the question as to why the health scare was included at all). Relationship successes, professional fulfillment, and moments to shine abound in the last act. It's almost too pleasant for a spell, like the happiness-to-sadness ratio is distractingly unrealistic. But then there is an inevitable sad part, crucial to "Downton Abbey" lore, something that fans have probably been surprised has taken this long to transpire.

But it's handled perfectly, with appropriate sensitivity and even trademark wit.

All the best things about "Downton Abbey" are out in full force in "A New Era," from the acting to the writing to the production design. I'd say it might be in line for an Oscar nomination or two if its release weren't buried so early in the year. Will there be more of "Downton Abbey," on big screen or small? My guess is yes, since absolutely everything gets run into the ground in this era. But I shudder to think of continuation, because this is the perfect stopping point for this franchise. Then again, I wasn't sure if "A New Era" would work, and my doubts have been proven unfounded.

Grade: B

"Downton Abbey: A New Era" is rated PG for some suggestive references, language and thematic elements. Its running time is 124 minutes.

WNE to offer online Doctor of Pharmacy program

SPRINGFIELD – Western New England University's College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences announces the launch of a new full-time, online distance pathway for new first year professional students to allow them to pursue a career in pharmacy remotely with a minimal on-campus commitment, according to a press release from WNE.

Offered as a high-quality online alternative to our campus-based Doctor of Pharmacy program, the PharmD Distance Pathway will allow students to pursue a career in pharmacy from anywhere and with more flexibility to meet life's demands. "The role of the pharmacist is changing," says Beth Welch, Senior Associate Dean for Academic Programs. "The Western New England University Doctor of Pharmacy program prepares students to be a part of that future. This is an ideal program for the self-motivated student, who will work through the same curriculum as our campus-based program."

The new program joins the College's two new master of science degree offerings in Pharmacogenomics and Pharmaceutical Sciences, and an accelerated pathway for high school graduates to earn both a bachelor's degree and a doctor of occupational therapy degree within six years.

Pending approval from the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education, the College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences will offer the PharmD Distance program beginning in the Fall 2022. Should the program not receive ACPE approval, admitted students will be offered a seat in the campus program.

To learn more about the online Doctor of Pharmacy program and application requirements and deadlines, people may visit <https://www1.wne.edu/pharmacy-and-health-sciences/academics/pharmd/distance-pathway.cfm> or call 413-796-2113.

WPI students complete research projects

WORCESTER – At Worcester Polytechnic Institute, all undergraduates are required to complete a research-driven, professional-level project that applies science and technology to addresses an important societal need or issue., according to a press release from WPI.

Local students completing the intensive research projects were Jared Bushnell of Rutland, Madelyn Thrasher of Hubbardston and Holly Perry of Gilbertville.

Bushnell, a member of the class of 2023, majoring in mechanical engineering completed a project titled "Geodome Maker Space Project."

Thrasher, a member of the class of 2023, majoring in biomedical engineering completed a project titled "Optimizing Atlas for Development's Internal Efficiency."

Perry, a member of the class of 2025 and majoring in aerospace engineering completed a project titled "Operation Paperclip: An Analysis of Immorality and Necessity."

About two-thirds of students complete a project at one of the university's 50-plus off-campus project centers, which are located around the world. A signature element of the innovative undergraduate experience at WPI, the project-based curriculum offers students the opportunity to apply their scientific and technical knowledge to develop thoughtful solutions to real problems, which affect the quality of people's lives and make a difference before they graduate.

The benefits of local newspapers

Local newspapers play vital roles in communities across the globe. The Information Age has changed the way many people get their news, but local newspapers continue to serve as valuable resources for readers interested in learning more about and becoming more involved in their communities.

While local publishers continue to adapt to the changes brought about by technology, the following are a handful of benefits unique to local newspapers.

- Local newspapers keep readers up-to-date on their own communities. Globalization may be here to stay, but that does not mean local communities are no longer home to newsworthy events. National and international newspapers and 24-hour cable news channels can keep men and women up-to-date on national and world news, but in many instances, local newspapers are the only means people have to learn about what's going on in their own communities. Local politics impact residents' lives every day, and local newspapers cover local politics extensively.

- Local newspapers benefit nearby businesses. Small business owners often connect with community members via local newspapers. A strong, locally based small business community can improve economies in myriad ways, creating jobs in the community and contributing tax dollars that can be used to strengthen local schools and infrastructure. And local newspapers do their part by providing affordable and effective advertising space to local business owners looking to connect with their communities.

- Local newspapers can strengthen communities. Local newspapers are great resources for residents who want to become more active in their communities and learn more about community events. Local newspapers often showcase community events like carnivals, local theater productions and projects like park cleanups. These are great ways for readers to become more active in their communities and build stronger communities as a result.

- Local newspapers can benefit children. National newspapers may have little age-appropriate content to offer young children, but local newspapers tend to include more soft news items than national periodicals, and such stories typically are appropriate for young readers. According to Newspapers in Education, students who participated in an NIE group in Florida performed significantly better in spelling and vocabulary than nonreaders.

Additional studies have indicated that students who use newspapers in the classroom perform better on standardized reading tests than those who do not use newspapers in class.

Many local newspapers have played vital roles in their communities for decades, providing a go-to resource for local readers and business owners.
