Country Bank donates more than $160,000 to support seniors and food insecurity

REGION — In response to the increasing needs of local families and seniors affected by the recent government shutdown, Country Bank announced donations of $160,000 to support food insecurity programs across Central and Western Massachusetts.

As the bank kicks off its annual “Season of Difference” campaign, it is donating an additional $25,000 to both the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Worcester County Food Bank. Earlier this year, each of these food banks received $100,000 as part of a 1 million-dollar pledge. Additionally, another $55,000 is being donated to local food pantries and $55,000 to senior centers throughout the region.

“With so many in our communities facing uncertainty and hardship, it’s more important than ever that we stand together,” said Mary McGovern, President and CEO of Country Bank. “These donations are one way we can help ensure that our neighbors have access to nutritious meals and the support they need during this challenging time.”

The “Season of Difference Campaign” highlights Country Bank’s long-standing dedication to strengthening local communities through financial support, volunteer efforts, and compassionate leadership. Each year, the Bank donates over $800,000 to nonprofits that focus on food insecurity, education, housing, and community well-being.

“As a community bank, giving back is at the heart of who we are,” said Shelley Regin, Chief Marketing and Community Relations Officer. “This season, we are focused on making a meaningful difference for our neighbors and ensuring that those most affected by current economic challenges receive the help they need.”

Saunders votes to advances bill protecting health care workers from workplace violence

BOSTON – The Massachusetts House of Representatives voted unanimously today to pass comprehensive legislation aimed at improving safety for health care workers across the Commonwealth. The bill strengthens protections for frontline staff, establishes new statewide prevention standards, improves reporting practices, and clarifies legal penalties for assaults occurring inside health care facilities.

Representative Aaron Saunders (D–Belchertown) said the legislation reflects a growing and urgent need to address the rise in violence experienced by nurses, clinicians, and support staff. “Health care workers keep our communities healthy, often under tremendous pressure,” Saunders said. “Too many have faced threats or violence while simply doing their jobs. This bill takes meaningful steps to protect those who care for us, while ensuring facilities have the tools, standards, and accountability needed to keep workers safe.”

Under the bill, every health care employer must conduct annual, facility-specific risk assessments developed in partnership with employees and labor representatives. Each facility will adopt a violence-prevention plan that includes hazard mitigation strategies, staff training, crisis response protocols, and post-incident debriefing. Violence-related incidents will be reported annually to the Department of Public Health and district attorneys to ensure accurate statewide data while maintaining confidentiality. The legislation also imposes civil penalties for employers who fail to comply with these requirements and safeguards workers from retaliation.

The bill codifies penalties for assaults against health care workers and contracted employees performing their duties inside clinical settings. Assaults causing bodily injury may result in up to five years in state prison or two and a half years in a house of correction, along with fines. Assaults causing serious bodily injury may carry penalties of up to ten years in state prison or two and a half years in a house of correction, in addition to fines. These provisions acknowledge the heightened risk in areas such as emergency departments, inpatient units, and psychiatric units.
