Quabbin, along with a treatment facility in Belchertown. From there, water is dispersed and delivered by gravity to surrounding communities such as Wilbraham, Chicopee and South Hadley Fire District No. 1, through the Chicopee Valley Aqueduct, where, along the way, it is stored in the Nash Hill Covered Storage Tank in Ludlow before being transferred to the Chicopee Water Treatment Plant on Burnett Road.
“I want to add that the storage facility in Ludlow provides large-scale storage of the water. It then reaches Burnett Road, where it is treated, and then it makes its way out to the general public, and at this moment we currently have two distribution mains from Nash Hill, and an additional two at Burnett Road which makes their way out to Sheridan Street near Walmart,” Lonczak said. “However, we are looking to make repairs to one of the pipes, which is 36 inches in diameter and is reaching the end of its lifespan. The latter is 30-inch diameter, which is running smoothly, but this change needs to happen sooner rather than later.”

Lonczak said that the replacement will be a new ductile iron pipe, which is steel on the exterior and concrete on the inside, with a projected lifespan of up to 100 years.
The meeting also revealed that the DPW is looking to replace and implement new AMI(Advanced Meter Infrastructure) water meters.

“The city is currently going through and replacing those meters with ‘smart meters’ to go in and find out, which can be read with a handheld digital device, and can transmit readings via cellular, so we don’t have to spend so much time reading meters, and that’s going to be an ongoing process coming up in the next couple of years, and as always staying in the loop for ongoing

WATER TREATED?

- Water at the Brutsch facility is treated with sodium hypochlorite (a form of chlorine) and ultraviolet light (UV) for primary disinfection. Primary disinfection kills any pathogens that may be present in water.
- When the water reaches Chicopee, it is further treated with:
  - Sodium Hypochlorite- To provide greater residual pathogenic treatment throughout the large distribution system
  - Sodium Bicarbonate (a.k.a. baking soda)- This reduces the corrosivity of the water
  - Sodium Carbonate- This increases pH and adjust along with an increase in alkalinity reduces the water’s corrosivity
  - Sodium Polyphosphate- This chemical is primarily used to reduce red water problems caused by iron water mains. It does not remove the iron from the water, but stops it from oxidizing to the visible red state (rust). Therefore, the iron is still there, but in a colorless form. This chemical process is known as sequestering.
  - Monosodium Phosphate- This chemical is primarily used to reduce lead and copper in drinking water. It leaves a protective film (deposition of phosphate compounds) on the inside surface of pipes providing a barrier between the water and the pipe, therefore reducing corrosion.

hydrant flushing,” Lonczak said.
Among those in attendance was Refill Water Store Owner Brian Cabral and his family, who shared this was a great experience for all.
“I feel this forum was extremely important. Just me being a business owner, especially being in the water industry, I have customers that come in daily, and they are concerned about their drinking water, tap water, and so coming here, I learned more that I can share, as well as giving the benefits of what we offer, but also let them know that the drinking water in Chicopee is safe and one of the best,” Cabral said.

Those in attendance were, also, invited to participate in a survey to share their feedback.

to reach out to the billing office,” Duffy reported. “These differences in self-advocacy may be widening the gap in financial burden of health care between those with higher and lower socioeconomic status.”
Self-advocacy is not easy, and challenging a medical bill can be time-consuming and frustrating. Some of the people in Duffy’s study said they had spent five hours or more contesting a bill, and quite a few said they didn’t feel the people in charge were respectful to them.
But if the outcome is a reduced bill or a payment plan, it can be worth the effort. It’s estimated that Americans are carrying more than $200 billion in medical debt, the majority of it by people who owe $10,000 or more. While the three major credit agencies no longer include medical debts under $500 on credit reports, it can still impact credit scores if the health organization reports it to the credit agencies.

Tellingly, only 3.5 percent of the respondents sought help from an advocacy organization to contact the billing office, Duffy said. The time burden plus the fact that many of the people surveyed didn’t reach out at all indicates “there may be an unmet need for formal assistance navigating bills,” she wrote.
Patient advocates are one source of such formal assistance. They navigate the intricacies of the health-care system itself and its mind-boggling billing systems, too. A medically trained patient advocate can look at an itemized medical bill and spot duplications and inconsistencies that a lay advocate may miss.
To avoid mistakes and misunderstandings, understand your health insurance coverage; ask questions when you don’t. Know what your deductibles, coinsurance, co-pays and out-of-pocket maximums are. Ask why your doctor is ordering certain tests or procedures. Call your insurer in advance to find out how much you’ll be asked to pay. Always document the answers you receive, who you spoke to, and when. Get promises in writing. And if you’re uninsured, be upfront about it.

After all that, if you still receive a bill you think has errors, advocate for yourself and you may save yourself some money.
